

Blast Furnace Liner

A modern blast furnace is refractory lined to protect the furnace shell from the high temperatures and abrasive materials inside the furnace. The refractory lining is cooled to further enhance the protection against the dispatch of excess heat that can destroy the refractory lining. With neutron a review of this lining would be possible to avoid a destruction of the blast furnace.